TASTING NOTES:

The scallop's shell ("vieira" in Spanish) is much more than delicious seafood and the perfect pairing for this extraordinary white; it is the official symbol of Galicia, a unique region in northwestern Spain with gaelic roots and green fiord-like slopes that meet the Atlantic sea forming the renowned "Rias". Floral, tropical-fruit aromas suggest orange and mango. This is juicy and under control on the palate, with dry white-fruit and citrus flavors. On the finish, it shows ample freshness and length.

ABOUT RIAS BAIXAS

Rias Baixas' coastline is comprised of inlets reminiscent of Norway's fjords and boasts some of Spain's most stunning beaches and an endless supply of fresh seafood. Rias Baixas is also the birthplace of Albarino, Spain's most famous white variety. In Rias Baixas, this grape shares the same nutrient-poor but mineral-rich soils and moderate climate as other renowned white wine producing regions.
